History of CAP Teletype Circuit PL 12101

Subject circuit operating between Signals Center, Pentagon, and the FBIS wire room was in use by FBIS during FCC and War Department administration of FBIS. It was presumably covered by a War Department contract during this entire period. FBIS was not charged for it.

The same service was continued subsequent to the transfer of FBIS to CIA in November 1946, and no written agreement concerning reimbursement of charges was made to the knowledge of this office.

The fact that two other CAP circuits between the same points and for the same purpose are covered by CIA contracts, and that circuit 12101 terminates at FBIS in CIA teletype machines, leads reason, however, to the reimbursement of War Department for the charges incurred subsequent to the transfer of FBIS.
